PAINTING WITH BROAD STROKES

GET READY TO EXPLORE YOUR SENSES

November 10th at 1:00 P.M.

by Scott Alixander Sonders

California Writers will bring the best artists from the SFV Art Club to share an extraordinary escapade called “EKPHRASIS” - where one art form inspires another.

This event is about the intersection of art and writing. Visual language and evocative imagery create a "painting" for your reader. Now it will do the same for the painters & artists!

First, members of the Art Club will bring us a selection of their works and will hear from us our on-the-spot written interpretations. And they will, in turn, select some of your own writings to visualize and transform into a painting -- also on-the-spot. Bring something short & sweet!

We'll have easels, paints, pencils, and paper everywhere. Be prepared to be inspired. At the beginning of our meet-up, we'll give the Art Club samples of our writings. Then, they'll choose those that inspire them to paint or sketch. At the same time, there will be several finished paintings displayed around the room for the writers to view – and our literary geniuses will choose something that inspires a paragraph or a poem.

We'll have proof that "a picture is worth a thousand words" and as Rod Stewart said, "Every picture tells a story, don't it?" 😊
I almost had a cardiac arrest just watching him and Bruce Zacuto heroically build everything up – and then tear it all down.

I even had a chance to pitch our group to the Mayor of Los Angeles, Antonio Villaraigosa. I planted a Vulcan mind probe on the poor guy and wouldn’t release it until he pledged his support.

Of course, while I was doing that, Stephany Spencer was doing what she does best -- reeling in hordes of new members.

One of those, with a name too famous to embarrass, told me this story: "Mahatma Gandhi, as you know, walked barefoot most the time, which produced an impressive set of calluses on his feet. He also ate very little, which made him rather frail and with his odd diet, he suffered from bad breath."
This made him (wait for the rim shot) – A super calloused fragile mystic hexed by halitosis."

And if that doesn't elicit a groan, here's a parable on why it's important to hone your writerly craft: I once asked my workshop to punctuate these words: "woman without her man is nothing". From the men I got: "Woman, without her man, is nothing." And from the women I got: "Woman! Without her, man is nothing." ☺

Rewind

Candid Writing

by Danielle Ste. Just

Have you ever wanted to sit down with a WGA-nominated screenwriter over a cup of coffee and chat about the industry? That's exactly what happened at Saturday’s California Writers meeting.

David Titcher, whose works include “The Librarian: Quest for the Spear,” “Around the World in 80 Days,” and “The Curse of King Tut’s Tomb,” graciously allowed Scott Sonders to interview him in a segment titled, “Screenwriting as a Martial Art: A Writer’s Studio One-On-One.”

David was candid, generous with personal anecdotes and described his penchant for sleeping all day and writing all night. His first job was to deliver drugs for a local Encino pharmacy. As a Valley boy, he “filters everything through Encino,” which makes writing gritty urban pieces a bit of a challenge. He has come to realize there is a constant theme in his writing: “intelligence is cool.”

His advice for screenwriters was just as illuminating. He exhorts screenwriters to submit more than one project. David is working on 51 projects right now!
He also admitted to the reality of ageism in Hollywood and confessed he would not reveal his true age in a pitch meeting.

Some of the industry details he shared included the formidable number of screenplays submitted each year. He estimates that 100,000 are written each year in Los Angeles alone. Also, the there is the dwindling number of pages in an acceptable script. Today, studios want a feature script in at 100 to 110 pages. The secret that’s not really a secret is that the writer maintains zero control over the script once it leaves his or her hands.

Member Showcase

The Member Showcase segment, featuring Wayne Levine, also held candid moments. Wayne shared his love of writing and love of life with us.

For several years, as he immersed himself in his family and career, he had an inkling that something was missing. One day, he sat down and wrote, “Forgiveness for Forgotten Dreams,” which is found in his first eponymous poetry collection.

With that one poem, he realized what had been missing. Now Wayne leaps up out of bed in the morning to begin his day writing. He revealed some of his writing process with us, including a Mimosa tree he can see from his house, which inspires his work.

Wayne also shared two other poems with us, “Chance and Circumstance” and “No Way Back.” He has published two books of poetry, the second titled, “Myths & Artists,” with a third scheduled for publication very soon.

David Titcher Quotes

“Unlike directors or actors, writers can sit at home and write a great script – and nobody will care how old they are.”

- On the writer’s role in movie production: “A director told me ‘on the set, (he was) the general.’ And I said, "You may be a general, but the writer is God.”
- On his vision of a story changing from the page to the screen: “I’ve basically been horrified every time I’ve seen something of mine on the screen.”
- On the failings of Around the World in 80 Days: “My revenge is that it cost the studio a $100 million. But that didn’t help my career.”
- On the writing process: “I’ve never written anything that was easy. The first draft is always torture.”
CWC members began our meeting with the Open Mike segment. Mike Cahill, Richard Deets, Danielle Ste. Just, and Matt Schliesman shared their poetry, while Elaine Shevin read a riveting passage from her novel, “Winds of Time.”

The day was full of writers sharing of themselves, which is an easy task in such a supportive atmosphere. We said goodbye until next month, when we will once again come together as a community of writers.

---

Coming in December

Crazy Queries with Sharlene Martin, local big-time literary agent, and owner of Martin Literary Management.

She says, “Crazy Queries” is sure to be the best advice you’ll ever get on what NOT to do with your writing career!” Along with other solid advice, she will stress the importance of a pre-query game plan, and then outline the essential elements of effective queries. Her expertise and “considerate literary management for the 21st Century” has landed many of her writers on the best sellers list, plus such shows as Oprah.

---

Coming in January

Actor, writer, public speaker and editor, Anthony Flacco, on crime writing.

He says, “True crime” is all about getting the story rights: choices of action and character are secondary. “Crime fiction” is all about getting the story right: choices of genre and style are secondary. His one-hour seminar goes straight to the how and why of it. Come and enjoy!
Wordsmith

The Peril of Thoughts

by Danielle Ste. Just

Childhood Notwithstanding
I am willing but not able to suspend my belief.
Days of wine and roses are magical enough,
who needs the complication of night:
swapping fluids followed by stories exchanged while propped up against sweaty pillows.

II
Crème de la Crème

Is the casket large enough to hold all the grief you caused me?
Can I pack it tightly around your stiff body, where it will nibble at your confidence, for once, instead of mine?

NOT GOOD ENOUGH, NOT GOOD ENOUGH,

III
Cupcakes Are Soft Enough
to eat with dentures, luckily, for when I am old I want a pleasant roundness about me.

Ladies of the Afternoon

by M. J. Cahill

Oh, dregly pranter
Winsome banter
Droning, droning dreadly on
Boorish babble
Drooling drabble
Crack o’ doom and bust the dawn

Yacky, yacky
Stabby backy
Not belong so making fun

Flying fur
Yet so demure
More.

************

Call for Submissions

We are soliciting items for the December Scribe. Submit your articles about writing, memoirs, essays, short stories, and excerpts from fiction/non-fiction (limited to 500 words) as well as poetry and 300-word film, stage, and fiction/non-fiction reviews.

Submissions are to be sent to editor, George Hirai, Scribe Editor, as WORD attachments (only) to:

cwcsfv@gmail.com

Submittal deadline: November 16
Venita Louise

I grew up in a dysfunctional family. Actually, it was a broken home, but we stayed together out of habit. I assigned myself a very important job within the family -- to keep everyone laughing, sort of like the skills of a rodeo clown. And I was good at it.

It took some time for me to discover my true creativity. I started out rendering pet portraits for the almost rich and famous. I eventually quit the sketching biz because my human clients demanded that I paint their noses smaller and give them more hair, as though I was a cosmetic surgeon.

The love of my life now is writing. But the ghost of the rodeo clown never left me and materializes on its own volition, infusing my stories with humor.

As a writer, I can be myself, accountable to no one. How many people are lucky enough to have found that? 😊

Venita Louise announces:

• Still Available: “Mixed Nuts,” trade paperback by Vintage Romance Publishing
• Still Available: “Mixed Nuts,” trade paperback by Vintage Romance Publishing Online: “In the Rough” in electronic format by Loose Id Publications
• Coming soon: “In Mysterious Ways” in electronic format by Forbidden Publications

Erica Stux - is a local writer with numerous publications. “Who, Me? Paranoid?” is her 7th published book (not counting 3 chapbooks of poetry). The other books include collective biographies of women in the arts and women scientists, 2 other biographies for young people, one novel, and a memoir of a co-author titled, "Sequins and Sorrow."

An excerpt from "Who, Me? Paranoid?" is included in the current issue of the online magazine www.clevemag.com. It's an account of the ups and downs of a whale-watching cruise, titled "Whales and Wails."

The Scribe: serving the writers of greater Los Angeles

GET YOUR 15-MINUTES OF FAME...
NOW x3 - OPEN MICS!

1 - Our regular monthly meet at Encino Community Center

2 - Borders Books in Canoga Park, Sign-ups begin at 6:45PM
   The third Thursday of every month - 6510 Canoga Avenue
   For info or advance sign-ups, email: mdeets@socal.rr.com

3 - Barnes & Noble in Encino, Sign-ups begin at 6:45PM
   The second Friday of every month - 16461 Ventura Boulevard
   For info or advance sign-ups, email: cwcsfv@gmail.com

© 2007 – All material on these pages may not be copied, or used for any purpose without express written consent from the publisher.

CWC-SFV
Box 17897
Encino, CA 91416
Website: calwritersssfv.com
Email: cwcsfv@gmail.com